

Rainforest walk Behind Walindi.

Butterflies!

Explore the other side of PNG, away from the waters edge. The rainforests here teem with exotic species of birds and butterflies. Guests are invited to perch on a small hillock, and watch as flocks of twittering and calling lorikeets come into roost for the night, Brilliant flashes of the Blue-eyed Cockatoos, Hornbills with their distinctive honking call, and the loud noise of their wings in flight, while through the lower trees flashes of blue reveal the flight of kingfishers; the air is filled with birdcalls. Not just for the birdwatcher, a visit to Nicks is a chance to relax, revelling in the peace of the tropical rainforests, dwarfed by towering trees. Nestled in amongst the rainforest are small clearings of locally grown fruit and vegetables such as banana, taro and kau kau.

Parrots and cockatoos

Guests can go on a short little jaunt into the perimeter or head deep up into the hills learning the local medicines and cultural practices, including survival skills like gathering wild fruits and nuts, drinking water from giant vines, setting snares for bush fowl and starting fires with bamboo.

Flowers

The best casual times for tours are 5:30 - 7:30 am or to round off a relaxing day from 3:30 to 7pm, for a day hike the best time to start is around 7am.

Bring long trousers and a long sleeved shirt, along with mosquito repellent. A small torch or flashlight, camera and binoculars. Comfortable walking shoes are the best, flip flops might suffice or you can try barefoot like Nick.

Cultural traditions

Tropical Survival skills