

The village walk

Children

villagers live from the land, growing fruit and vegetables in their gardens. This food provides the bulk of daily diets. You are invited to visit one of the local villages, to see their way of living and gain an insight into local culture.

village life centres around a strong community spirit, homes clustered around the road, and gardens. It is here that many of the fruits and vegetables that you see sold at the markets at walindi are grown. Every where you go in the village you will be accompanied by the children, from the boisterous boys who will chatter in your wake, to the younger children who peep shyly from behind the houses or their mothers skirts. Take their photo with a digital camera and show them the shot and you will have friends for life. Papua New Guineans are very friendly and sociable people, and you will quickly be drawn into conversation as you make your way through the village. Visiting the village is a delightful way to spend a morning or afternoon,
